Attorneys for Mr. Smith-Baltiher

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

(HONORABLE LARRY A. BURNS)

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff, v. GENARO SMITH-BALTIHER, Defendant.	Case No. 07CR3161-LAB DATE: January 7, 2008 TIME: 2:00 p.m. STATEMENT OF FACTS AND MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT'S MOTIONS IN LIMINE

I.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Mr. Smith-Baltiher is charged with being a deported alien found in the United States in violation of Title 8, United States Code § 1326. Mr. Smith-Baltiher hereby incorporates the statement of facts from the memorandum of points and authorities in support of his previous motions.

II.

THIS COURT SHOULD ADMIT HEARSAY EVIDENCE OFFERED BY FAMILY MEMBERS AS TO THE BIRTH OF OTHER FAMILY MEMBERS RELEVANT TO MR. SMITH-BALTIHER'S DERIVATIVE CITIZENSHIP

"Because alienage is an element of the offense, Smith is entitled to have the jury determine that question at trial... Because derivative citizenship would negate that element of the offense, Smith must be allowed to present that defense to the jury. It is only after the jurors consider Smith's evidence of derivative citizenship that they will be able to decide whether the government had successfully met its burden." Smith-Baltiher, 424 F.3d at 921-922. "8 U.S.C. § 1401(g) provides that Smith is entitled to derivative citizenship if prior to his birth his mother was both a United States citizen and physically present in the U.S. for a period of not less than five years, at least two of which were after attaining the age of fourteen." Smith-Baltiher, 424 F.3d at 922 n.8.

Mr. Smith-Baltiher anticipates that he will offer evidence that is material to the element of alienage, including evidence of reputation of facts of personal or family history. This Court should admit such relevant evidence pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 803(19), which provides that even if the declarant is unavailable, such evidence should not be excluded under the hearsay rule. "[Rule 803(19)] ... plainly contemplates that members of a family may testify with regard to the common understanding as to the birth of another family member." United States v. Jean-Baptiste, 166 F.3d 102, 111 (2d Cir. 1999). Accordingly, such evidence should be admitted.

III.

THE GOVERNMENT MUST BE PRECLUDED FROM USING DEPORTATION OR REMOVAL DOCUMENTS AT TRIAL

A. The Warrant of Deportation and the Order of Deportation Are Only Admissible to Establish the Fact of the Deportation, Not Alienage

Mr. Smith-Baltiher expects that the government will seek to introduce a warrant of deportation and an order of deportation to establish the fact of his deportation. These two documents are admissible only to establish the fact of the deportation. See, e.g., United States v. Contreras, 63 F.3d 852, 857 (9th Cir. 1995); United States v. Hernandez-Rojas, 617 F.2d 533, 535-36 (9th Cir. 1980). Neither the warrant of deportation nor the order of deportation reflect the "objective, ministerial fact" of alienage; accordingly, neither are admissible under Federal Rule of Evidence 803(8)(B) to establish the fact of alienage.

Both the warrant of deportation and the order of deportation reflect the ministerial fact of the deportation, not Mr. Smith-Baltiher's alleged alienage. As the Ninth Circuit has explained:

> Clearly it would be improper for the government to rely on factual findings from a deportation hearing to prove an element of the crime of illegal reentry, as the burden of proof in a criminal proceeding requires a greater showing by the government than in an administrative hearing. The use of a deportation order to prove the element of alienage would allow the government to skirt around the more stringent requirements of a criminal proceeding by relying on that factual finding from the INS proceeding. To put it more simply, the government would demonstrate that Medina is an alien by showing that the INS found that he was an alien.

United States v. Medina, 236 F.3d 1028, 1030, 1031 (9th Cir. 2001) (emphasis added). Simply put, alienage is not a fact that is observed; it is a fact that is "found" by an INS official after an administrative hearing, and the order of deportation reflects the quintessential "factual finding" rendered after an administrative hearing. Likewise, the warrant of deportation reflects only that an immigration judge found Mr. Smith-Baltiher to be an alien after an administrative hearing, and that Mr. Smith-Baltiher may have been removed from the United States after that deportation—it has no bearing whatsoever on the fact of alienage. Accordingly, the warrant of deportation and order of deportation are not admissible under Federal Rule of Evidence 803(8) or Federal Rule of Evidence 401 to establish the fact of alienage.[1]

Finally, to the extent that this Court finds that these documents are relevant under Federal Rule of Evidence 401, these documents should still be excluded pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 403, because their probative value is substantially outweighed by their prejudicial effect. Both the order of deportation and warrant of deportation make reference to an "alien;" even more troubling, in the context of these documents, the term "alien" is associated with Mr. Smith-Baltiher, who presumably is the "alien" to which the documents refer. In the face of these quasi-official government documents proclaiming Mr. Smith-Baltiher to be an "alien," there is a real danger that jurors will no longer see the alienage element of 8 U.S.C. § 1326 as an open question that the government must prove beyond a reasonable doubt.

Should the Court nonetheless admit these documents, Mr. Smith-Baltiher requests that this Court instruct the jury, pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 105, that it may only consider the warrant of deportation and the order of deportation to establish the fact of the deportation and for no other purpose, and

[1] In United States v. Hernandez-Herrera, 273 F.3d 1213, 1217-1218 (9th Cir. 2001), the Ninth Circuit stated summarily that A-file documents are admissible under Federal Rule of Evidence 803(8)(B) to establish the fact of alienage. Because the court failed to set forth any reasoned discussion, failed to discuss the decision in Medina, and did not specify which documents from the A-file were admitted in Mr. Hernandez-Herrera's case, see id., this case is not binding authority, and this Court must still address this issue. See, e.g., Miranda B. v. Kitzhaber, 328 F.3d 1181, 1186 (9th Cir. 2003) (per curiam) (requiring "reasoned consideration in a published opinion" for a "ruling [to] becom[e] the law of the circuit"); United States v. Collicott, 92 F.2d 973, 980 n.4 (9th Cir. 1996) (holding that prior Ninth Circuit case is not binding "in the absence of reasoned analysis and analogous facts"). In any event, Hernandez-Herrera never held that these documents were admissible under Federal Rules of Evidence 401 or 403 or the Fifth and Sixth Amendments. See Webster v. Fall, 266 U.S. 507, 512 (1925) (stating that "[q]uestions which merely lurk in the record, neither brought to the attention of the court nor ruled upon are not to be considered as having been so decided as to constitute precedent").

that these documents do not, in and of themselves, establish the fact of alienage. Mr. Smith-Baltiher further requests that this Court redact these documents to exclude any reference to his alleged alienage.

B. None of the Other A-File Documents Are Admissible Under Any Rule of Evidence.

Mr. Smith-Baltiher anticipates that the government may seek to admit other documents from the A-file, including the order to show cause why a person should not be deported and warnings regarding the possible penalties for reentry. None of these documents from the A-file are admissible to establish any matter at issue in this trial. All documents from the A-file—except the warrant of deportation and the order of deportation discussed previously—are irrelevant under Federal Rule of Evidence 401; more prejudicial than probative, cumulative, and a waste of time under Federal Rule of Evidence 403; and inadmissible hearsay under Federal Rule of Evidence 803(8).

1. The Notice to Appear Is Inadmissible.

The Notice to Appear is inadmissible under Federal Rules of Evidence 401, 403, and 803(8). The Notice to Appear is a document that provides an alien with notice of the grounds for removal. It does not record the "objective, ministerial fact" of alienage or of a deportation any more than an indictment provides an objective observation that a person committed a crime. This document is nothing more than an accusation that the government must prove in an immigration proceeding.

2. The Warnings of Possible Penalties Is Inadmissible.

Likewise, the warning of possible penalties is inadmissible under Federal Rules of Evidence 401, 403, and 803(8). The warning of possible penalties contains boilerplate statements (drafted by the former INS) regarding the penal consequences to an alien who illegally reenters the country. It has no bearing on whether a defendant is in fact an alien, and it makes no fact at issue in this case more or less probable. This document contains inadmissible hearsay, and is completely irrelevant. It is also more prejudicial than probative. Among other things, given the serious consequences listed on the warning of possible penalties, jurors may be led to speculate what this defendant did to be subject to such harsh penalties upon reentry; needless to say, such speculation is completely irrelevant to the charge at hand and could be severely prejudicial. Accordingly, the warnings of possible penalties also must be excluded at trial.

3. If this Court Finds That These Documents Are Somehow Relevant, They Are Not Admissible to Establish Alienage; Thus, This Court Should Order the Documents Redacted and Provide the Jury With a Limiting Instruction.

To the extent that this Court finds any A-file document relevant to some point, the document is not admissible to establish Mr. Smith-Baltiher's alienage. Accordingly, this Court should redact these documents to exclude all references to alienage as well as any other prejudicial information such as prior aggravated felony convictions. Additionally, the Court should instruct the jury as to the limited value of such documents pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 105.

C. This Court Must Preclude the Admission of the A-file Documents to Establish Alienage to Protect Mr. Smith-Baltiher's Constitutional Rights.

Finally, this Court must preclude the admission of A-file documents to establish the fact of alienage to protect Mr. Smith-Baltiher's rights to confrontation of witnesses and to a jury trial based upon proof beyond a reasonable doubt—rights guaranteed by the Fifth and Sixth Amendments. Because the right to confrontation is not applicable in immigration proceedings, the government may have met its burden of proving alienage in such a proceeding based upon otherwise inadmissible hearsay. Cunanan v. INS, 856 F.2d 1373, 1374 (9th Cir. 1988). Similarly, because a criminal defendant such as Mr. Smith-Baltiher never has the opportunity to confront those witnesses upon whose hearsay statements the immigration judge may have relied, the admission of the (former) INS' evaluation of alienage deprives a defendant of his right to confront the witnesses against him.

Additionally, in immigration proceedings, the government need only establish alienage by clear and convincing evidence. Murphy v. INS, 54 F.3d 605, 608-610 (9th Cir. 1995). Once the government has established a person's foreign birth, the burden shifts to the purported alien to establish, by a preponderance of the evidence, that he falls within one of the statutory provisions for derivative citizenship. Id. Given the lower burden of proof and the shifting presumption, the admission of A-file documents against a criminal defendant to establish the fact of alienage has the effect of lowering the government's burden of proving alienage in the criminal trial.

Finally, a determination of alienage by a quasi-judicial decision-maker represents powerful evidence of an element of the offense, and it creates a substantial risk that the jury will give this evidence undue weight or conclusive effect. Cf. Nipper v. Snipes, 7 F.3d 415, 418 (4th Cir. 1993) (internal quotations omitted) (stating "judicial findings of fact 'present a rare case where, by virtue of there having been made by a judge, they would likely be given undue weight by the jury, thus creating a serious danger of unfair prejudice'"); Federal Rules of Evidence 803(22), Advisory Committee Note (observing that "it seems safe to assume that the jury will give [evidence of a criminal judgment] substantial effect unless defendant offers a satisfactory explanation"). The government's introduction of a government agency's finding of alienage to establish the fact of alienage carries with it the imprimatur of governmental, if not judicial, approval. The admission of this factual finding undermines a defendant's constitutional right to a reliable jury finding of an essential element.

In sum, because the A-file documents are generated by the government without the constitutional safeguards surrounding criminal proceedings, it is unconscionable and constitutionally untenable to authorize their admission, as evidence of alienage, in a criminal prosecution. This Court should exclude these documents in their entirety; or, to the extent the Court finds that these documents are admissible to prove some other fact, it should redact these documents to exclude reference to Mr. Smith-Baltiher's alienage and instruct the jury as to the documents' limited relevance.

D. The Certificate of Nonexistence of Record Is Inadmissible Because it Violates the Confrontation Clause of the U.S. Constitution and Allows the Government to Circumvent its Discovery Obligations.

Mr. Smith-Baltiher has not received notice that the government intends to introduce a Certificate of Nonexistence of Record (hereinafter "CNER"). Therefore, Mr. Smith-Baltiher assumes that the government will not attempt to use such a document. Nonetheless, this document is inadmissible because it violates the Confrontation Clause. U.S. Const. Amend VI; Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36 (2004) (holding that admission of testimonial statements of a witness who does not appear at trial and who the defendant did not have a prior opportunity to cross-examine violates the confrontation clause of the Sixth Amendment). But see United States v. Cervantes-Flores, 421 F.3d 825 (9th Cir. 2005) (holding that CNER is non-testimonial). If the government changes its position on this issue, Mr. Smith-Baltiher requests the opportunity to submit further briefing on this issue.

IV.

THIS COURT SHOULD PROHIBIT ANY EVIDENCE UNDER FEDERAL RULE OF EVIDENCE 404(b) AND 609 BECAUSE THE GOVERNMENT HAS FAILED TO PROVIDE ADEQUATE NOTICE OF OTHER CRIMES, WRONGS, OR ACTS

A. Exclusion of Other Acts Evidence Under Rules 404(b)and 403.

Defense counsel believes that the government will seek to introduce Mr. Smith-Baltiher's prior convictions for illegal reentry of deported alien in violation of 8 U.S.C. § 1326, illegal entry in violation of 8 U.S.C. § 1325, and false claim to United States citizenship in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 911. Evidence of these convictions would be highly prejudicial as to the alienage and deportation elements because the jury would be likely to subject these elements to a lesser level of scrutiny knowing that a finder of fact has already concluded that the elements have been established. "District courts must assiduously guard juries against the siren song of irrelevant and prejudicial prior determinations." Arlio v. Lively, 474 F.3d 46, 53 (2d Cir. 2007).

Further, admission of such convictions would be contrary to the Ninth Circuit's prohibition of the use of offensive collateral estoppel against criminal defendants. See United States v. Smith-Baltiher, 424 F.3d 913, 922 (9th Cir. 2005). In Smith-Baltiher, the Ninth Circuit repudiated its prior rule allowing collateral estoppel to be used offensively against a criminal defendant in the context of illegal entry prosecutions. Id. at 920 (rejecting reasoning of United States v. Bejar-Matrecios, 618 F.2d 81, 83-84 (9th Cir. 1980)). Even with a limiting instruction, the admission of evidence of prior convictions would present a substantial danger of unfair prejudice. The jurors would essentially be shown that the alienage and deportation elements have already been established, and, thus, that they are relieved of their duty to scrutinize the evidence presented as to those elements. "[T]here are some contexts in which the risk that the jury will not, or cannot, follow instructions is so great, and the consequences of failure so vital to the defendant, that the practical and human limitations of the jury system cannot be ignored." Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123, 136 (1968) (recognizing the ineffectiveness of a limiting instruction to cure the prejudicial impact of powerfully incriminating evidence that is offered only for a limited, non-prejudicial purpose).

Evidence of prior convictions in which alienage and valid deportations were found to have been established is not admissible as to these elements given the Ninth Circuit's recent precedent prohibiting offensive collateral estoppel. Smith-Baltiher, 424 F.3d at 922. Further, admission of such evidence would be highly prejudicial to Mr. Smith-Baltiher, as jurors would likely attribute undue weight to the prior finding of fact, rather than independently scrutinizing the evidence. As Mr. Smith-Baltiher has the right to a jury finding of every essential element, evidence of these prior convictions should be excluded under the Fifth and Sixth Amendments, and Federal Rule of Evidence 403.

B. Exclusion of Prior Convictions to Impeach Witness Under Rule 609.

Federal Rule of Evidence 609(a)(1) restricts impeachment of the accused by evidence of a prior conviction to only those offenses for which the court determines that the probative value outweighs its prejudicial effect to the accused. The government should be precluded from introducing any evidence of Mr. Smith-Baltiher's prior convictions, as they are irrelevant under Federal Rule of Evidence 401, prejudicial under Federal Rule of Evidence 403 and old. See Fed. R. Evid. 609(b). Even if Mr. Smith-Baltiher were to testify at trial, the danger of unfair prejudice would substantially outweigh any possible relevance of his prior offense. Fed. R. Ev. 401, 403, 609.

To the extent that this Court rules that Mr. Smith-Baltiher's prior convictions are admissible under Federal Rule of Evidence 609, this Court should redact any documents referencing, and preclude the prosecutor from referring to, the offense and specific facts of any crime for which Mr. Smith-Baltiher was convicted. Such information would be more prejudicial than probative of Mr. Smith-Baltiher's guilt of the charged offense.

V.

THE COURT SHOULD EXCLUDE THE A-FILE CUSTODIAN

The Court shall exclude witnesses (other than a party to the proceeding) from the courtroom "so that they cannot hear the testimony of other witnesses," unless the person's presence is shown "to be essential to the presentation of the party's cause. . ." or the person is authorized by statute to be present. Fed. R. Evid. 615. The government has made no showing that the A-file custodian is such a person. Traditionally, witnesses such as A-file custodian do not participate in the arrest or investigation of deported alien cases other than to request and temporarily keep the accused's immigration "A" file. The government will use this witness as nothing more than a custodian to lay a foundation for the admission of certain documents it considers relevant. The Court should treat this witness as any other witness in this case and exclude him or her from trial.

VI.

THIS COURT SHOULD ALLOW ATTORNEY-CONDUCTED VOIR-DIRE

Pursuant to Rule 24(a), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, to provide effective assistance of counsel and to exercise Mr. Smith-Baltiher right to trial by an impartial jury, defense counsel requests the opportunity to personally voir dire the prospective members of the jury.

THIS COURT SHOULD PROHIBIT THE WITNESSES FROM REFERRING TO MR. SMITH-BALTIHER AS "THE ALIEN"

To convict Mr. Smith-Baltiher, the government must prove that he is an "alien." See 8 U.S.C. § 1326. "Alien" is a legal term that must be defined by this Court. See Berry v. City of Detroit, 25 F.3d 1342 (6th Cir. 1994) (responsibility of court, not testifying witnesses, to define legal terms); Fed. R. Evid. 704(a). It is also a finding that the jury must make; thus, no witness is permitted to opine that this element has been proved. See United States v. Espino, 32 F.3d 253, 257 (7th Cir. 1994) (question whether the defendant was "admitting the conspiracy" was improper because it required a legal conclusion).

The government likely will call several witnesses from the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), specifically, the A-file custodian, border patrol agents, and detention enforcement officers. Because the DHS has accused Mr. Smith-Baltiher of being an alien, it is anticipated that these witnesses will refer to Mr. Smith-Baltiher as "the alien." If these witnesses testify that Mr. Smith-Baltiher is an alien, it will create confusion among the jurors regarding this Court's instructions on the law and what the government has—or has not—proved, in violation of Federal Rule of Evidence 403. It will also subvert Mr. Smith-Baltiher's right to a jury finding of every essential element—a right guaranteed by the Fifth and Sixth Amendments. Accordingly, this Court should preclude the witnesses from referring to Mr. Smith-Baltiher as "the alien."

VIII.

THIS COURT SHOULD ORDER PRODUCTION OF GRAND JURY TRANSCRIPTS

The Court should order production of grand jury transcripts if a witness who likely will testify at the trial of Mr. Smith-Baltiher also is likely to have testified before the grand jury. Dennis v. United States, 384 U.S. 855 (1966); Fed. R. Crim. R. 26.2(f)(3). The defense requests that the government make such transcripts available in advance of trial to facilitate the orderly presentation of evidence and to remove any need for recess in the proceedings for defense counsel to examine the statements pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 26.2(d).

IX.

THIS COURT SHOULD SUPPRESS THE DEPORTATION HEARING AUDIOTAPE OR TRANSCRIPT

The Court must exclude any deportation hearing audiotape or transcript because they would contain un-Mirandized statements made by Mr. Smith-Baltiher in response to custodial interrogation. Questions asked in a custodial setting constitute interrogation if, under all the circumstances, the questions are "reasonably likely to elicit an incriminating response from the suspect." United States v. Booth, 669 F.2d 1231, 1237 (9th Cir. 1982)(citing Rhode Island v. Innis, 446 U.S. 291, 301 (1980)). In Mathis v. United States, 391 U.S. 1 (1968), the Supreme Court held that the defendant's statements to a revenue agent who was conducting a routine tax investigation were the product of custodial interrogation within the meaning of Miranda despite the fact that the agent's questioning was part of the routine tax investigation where no criminal proceedings could have even been brought and the defendant was in jail on an entirely separate offense. Id. at 4. The Court stated that "[t]hese differences are too minor and shadowy to justify a departure from the well-considered conclusions of Miranda with reference to warnings to be given to a person held in custody." Id.

In the immigration context, this Court has stated: "[i]f civil investigations by the INS were excluded from the Miranda rule, INS agents could evade that rule by labeling all investigations as civil. Civil as well as criminal interrogation of in-custody defendants by INS investigators should generally be accompanied by the Miranda warnings." United States v. Mata-Abundiz, 717 F.2d 1277, 1279 (9th Cir. 1983). In Mata-Abundiz, an INS investigator interviewed the defendant at a local jail, where he was being held on state charges, as part of a routine civil investigation without a prior Miranda advisement. In a subsequent federal prosecution for possession of a firearm by an alien, the district court permitted the government to introduce the defendant's statement to the INS investigator concerning his Mexican citizenship. This Court reversed the defendant's conviction recognizing that "the investigator cannot control the constitutional question by placing a 'civil' label on the investigation." Id. at 1280.

Moreover, the Ninth Circuit in Mata-Abundiz rejected the government's argument that the questioning fell within the exception to the Miranda requirements for routine background questioning attendant to arrest and booking. See United States v. Booth, 669 F.2d at 1237-38. In Booth, the court of appeals stated: "Ordinarily, the routine gathering of background, biographical data will not constitute interrogation. Yet we recognize the potential for abuse by law enforcement officers who might, under the guise of seeking 'objective' or 'neutral' information, deliberately elicit an incriminating statement from a suspect." Booth, 669 F.2d at 1238. The Court applied this objective test to Mata-Abundiz and found that the "background questions" related directly to an element of the offense to which the defendant was suspected and the questions were likely to elicit an incriminating response. Mata-Abundiz, 717 F.2d at 1280.

Like the questioning in Mathis and Mata-Abundiz, the questioning by the immigration judge in this case was "reasonably likely to elicit an incriminating response" within the meaning of Booth. All of Mr. Smith-Baltiher' statements were made in response to direct questioning by government officials. The questioning concerned Mr. Smith-Baltiher' place of birth, citizenship, and manner of entry into the United States. Federal law provides for criminal penalties to aliens who illegally enter the United States, see 8 U.S.C. §1325, and to aliens who illegally reenter the United States following deportation, see 8 U.S.C. § 1326.

In United States v. Solano-Godines, 120 F.3d 957, 961 (9th Cir. 1997), the government brought criminal charges against the defendant, Mr. Solano, for illegal reentry after a deportation. Id. at 959. Two years before, Mr. Solano appeared at a civil deportation hearing at which he made statements about his place of birth and citizenship. Id. Mr. Solano was not given Miranda warnings prior to making these statements. Id. Prior to trial, Mr. Solano filed a motion to suppress the statements at his deportation hearing. Id. at 960. The district court denied the motion and Mr. Solano entered a conditional plea agreement. Id. On appeal, the Ninth Circuit held that Miranda warnings were not required in that case because the immigration judge "could not be expected to anticipate that two years later Solano would illegally reenter the United States and that his responses to questions at his civil deportation hearing might incriminate him in a prosecution for this future crime." Id. at 962.

The Ninth Circuit's holding and reasoning in Solano-Godines is inapplicable to this case. In particular, any statements made at any immigration hearings after he had already been previously deported or removed from the United States should be excluded because Mr. Smith-Baltiher's responses to the immigration judge could have subjected him to criminal prosecution at that time, not some unknown time in the future. For that reason, the immigration judge should have advised him of his rights under Miranda.

Because Mr. Smith-Baltiher's admission were made without the benefit of Miranda warnings, and because he was affirmatively misled as to the consequence of making statements, his statements at the deportation hearing must be excluded. See United States v. Alderete-Deras, 743 F.2d 645, 648 (9th Cir. 1984) (noting that the lack of Miranda warnings at a civil deportation hearing might render statements made at the hearing inadmissible in a subsequent criminal trial).

X.

THE GOVERNMENT MUST BE PRECLUDED FROM INTRODUCING EVIDENCE OF A REINSTATEMENT OF DEPORTATION

Mr. Smith-Baltiher is aware that his position on this issue has been rejected by the panel's opinion in United States v. Diaz-Luevano, 494 F.3d 1159, 1162 (9th Cir. 2007) (per curiam), which held that the holding in Morales-Izquierdo v. Gonzalez, 486 F.3d 484 (9th Cir. 2007) (en banc), did not overrule United States v. Luna-Madellaga, 315 F.3d 1224 (9th Cir. 2003). Nonetheless, Mr. Smith-Baltiher believes that the Diaz-Luevano panel was an incorrect application of the Ninth Circuit's recent en banc decision in Morales-Izquierdo v. Gonzales, 486 F.3d 484 (9th Cir. 2007) (en banc).

Morales-Izquierdo reasoned "that reinstatement and removal are placed in different sections, which logically can be understood as indicating a congressional intention to treat reinstatement determinations differently from first-instance determinations of removability." See Morales-Izquierdo, 486 F.3d at 490. (quotation marks omitted). Because "Congress placed reinstatement in a separate section from removal suggests that reinstatement is a separate procedure, not a species of removal." Id. The en banc panel concluded that "Congress intended reinstatement to be a different and far more summary procedure than removal." Id.; see also United States v. Luna-Madellaga, 315 F.3d 1224, 1231 (9th Cir. 2003)(Thomas, J., dissenting) (stating that the "reinstatement process neither issues an order of removal nor considers new evidence that occurred after the date of the original order."). Put simply, Morales-Izquierdo held "Congress did not consider removal and reinstatement to be equivalent." Id. In fact, Morales-Izquierdo specifically rejected the notion that a reinstatement can result in new criminal penalties: "[t]he reinstatement order imposes no civil or criminal penalties." See id. at 498. See also Luna-Madellaga, 315 F.3d at 1231-32 (Thomas, J., dissenting) (explaining why a contrary result would be constitutionally doubtful).

Moreover, as the Ninth Circuit recently reiterated, and the government conceded, under section 1326, "to meet its burden of proof of a prior deportation, 'the government ... needs to prove that a deportation proceeding actually occurred with the end result of [the defendant] being deported.'" United States v. Castillo-Basa, 483 F.3d 890, 901 n.8 (9th Cir. 2007) (quoting United States v. Medina, 236 F.3d 1028, 1031 (9th Cir. 2001)). To prove previous deportation ... "the government must establish ... that a deportation proceeding occurred as to [the] defendant and as a result, ..., a warrant of deportation was issued and ... executed by the removal of the defendant from the United States." Id. at 898 (brackets in original). Castillo-Basa and Medina thus define the "immigration term of art" posited by Judge Thomas in his Luna-Madellaga dissent. Therefore, the government should not be permitted to admit evidence of any reinstatements.

XI.

THIS COURT SHOULD ALLOW MR. SMITH-BALTIHER LEAVE TO FILE FURTHER MOTIONS

Mr. Smith-Baltiher requests leave to file further motions as may be necessary.

XII.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, and for such other reasons as may appear at the hearing on these motions, Mr. Smith-Baltiher respectfully requests that the Court grant his motions, and accord such other relief as this Court deems just.

Respectfully submitted,
